Woodland high school students talk budget solutions

Woodland Joint Unified, Coalition for Youth asked children for input

Created: 03/19/2010 02:32:47 AM PDT

Pioneer and Woodland High school students participated in a budget discussion at the Woodland Joint Unified School District offices Wednesday evening.

Sponsored by the Woodland Coalition for Youth, the students were asked to come and speak about programs they want saved as well as how they can be saved in view of budget cuts.

The students broke into groups, which were led by teachers and principals. The results of the talk will be presented at an upcoming meeting of the school board.

In addition to the coalition, assistance was provided by the Yolo Family Resource Center and Woodland Youth Development Network.

"Our youth voices must be heard in these tough economic times," stated Gary Callahan, director of Secondary Education for WJUSD. "We need their input and ideas."

This meeting was the fifth in a series of seven Woodland Unified officials have held with the community, staff and students.

Callahan said he expects recommendations to be presented by April.

"When you look at the school districts around us, we have been very proactive at managing our resources and responding to this unprecedented crisis," he stated. "Our community has been fantastic at rallying around our students and supporting their programs for years. We are hopeful that the students will be able to provide us with valuable information that we can utilize as part of our planning efforts."
